

The Passing of Chancellor James C. Renick

Greetings Alumni and Friends,

The North Carolina A&T Family mourns the loss of Dr. James C. Renick, who served as the ninth chancellor of our university during an important time in its development.

Renick arrived as chancellor at A&T in 1999, with a reputation as an innovative academic leader and faculty member at multiple universities. During his tenure, A&T experienced significant enrollment growth and made strategic investments in new academic facilities, residence halls and critical new infrastructure across campus. He left A&T in 2006 to become vice president of the Washington, D. C.-based American Council on Education.

Chancellor Renick will be remembered as an impactful leader of the university and an educational professional with a heart for students. Our thoughts and prayers are with the Renick family as they grieve a husband and father.
